WORD OF THE LORD

Righteousness is Life, But Iniquity is Death.

WARNING TO THE WICKED

The Rev. Dr. Tulmage's Vivid Descrip-tion of the Ruissel City-Solematty Inspired by Surroundings.

Bucouttvs, Oct. 8.—In his sermon at the Brooklyn Tabornacie thus morning Rev. Dr. Talmage presented an arousing theme of the living cities of today drawn from the tamb of a deal city of the past. The opening hymn, led by cornet and or-gan, was joined by the voices of the mul-

Put on the strength; the nations shake.

The subject was "Pomped and Its Lessons," the text, Issiah xxv. 2, "Thou hast made of a defenced city a ruin."

A flush on the night sky greeted us as we left the rail train at Naples, Italy.

but was the strange illumination? It was that wrath of many centuries. Vesu-vins. Omnt son of an earthquake. Intoxicated mountain of Italy. Father of many consternations. A volcano, burning so long, sad yet to keep on burning until, perhaps, it may be the very torch that will kindle the last conflagration and set all the world on fire. It eclipses in set all the world on fire. It eclipses in violence of behavior Cotopaxi and Æina and Stromboli and Krakaton. Awful mystary. Funeral pyre of dead cities. Everlasting paroxysm of mountains. It seems nice a chimney of hell. It rears with fiery reminiscence of what it has slone and with threats of worse things that it may get do. I would not live in one of the villages at its base for a present of all Italy

On a day in December, 1631, it threw up ashes that floated away hundreds and hundreds of miles and dropped in Con-stantiacple, and in the Adriatic sea, and on the Apennines, as well as tramplin out at its own foot the lives of 18,000 people. Geologists have tried to fathom its my steries, but the heat consumed the iron instruments and drove back the scorehed and blistered explorers from the cindery and crumbling brink. 'It seems like the asylum of manine ele-

At one time far back its top had been a fortress, where Spartacus fought and was surrounded and would have been destroyed had it not been for the grapevines which clothed the mountain from top to base, and laying hold of them he climbed hand under hand to safety in the valley. But for centuries it has kept its furnace burning as we saw it that night on our arrival in November of 1880,

THE DEAD CITY. Of course the next day we started to see seems of the work wrought by that frenzied mountain. "All out for Pom-peil?" was the cry of the conductor. And now we stand by the corpse of that dead city. As we entered the gate and passed between the walls I took off my hat, as one naturally does in the presence of some imposing obsequies. That city had pomp. The home of grand architecture, exquisite painting, enchanting sculpture, unrestrained caronsal and rapt as blage. A high wall 20 feet thick, threefourties of it still visible, encircled the city. On those walls at a distance of sely 100 yards from each other towers rose for armed men who watched the city. The streets ran at right angles and from wall to wall, only one street n the days of the city's prosperity its towers glittered in the sun; eight strong gutes for ingress and ogress; Gate of the Seashore, Gute of Herculaneum, Gute of Vestivius being perhaps the most important. Yonder stood the Temple of Jupiter, hoisted at an imposing elevaumns of immense girth, which stood like carved sceberge shimmering in the light. There stands the Temple of the Twelve Gods. Yonder see the Temple of Hercules and the Temple of Mercury, with silver of marble and bas-relief, wonderful enough to astound all succeeding ares of art, and the Temple of Esculapans, brilliant with sculpture and gorgeome with painting. Youder are the theaters, partly cut into surrounding hills, and glorided with pictured walls, and entered under arches of imposing masonry, and with rooms for captivated and applaudatory audisnova sented or standing in vast semicircle. Youder are the costly and immense public baths of the city, with more than the modern ingenuities of Chrisbad. Notice the warmth of those ancient tepstariums, with lovering radiscuss of roof, and the vapor of those enidariums, with decorated alcoves, and the cold dush of their frigidariums, with fleors, of mousic and ceilings of all skillfully intermingled lines, and walls up-upholstered with all the colors of the setting sun, and sofas on which to recline for slumber after the plungs.

Yemler are the barracks of the celebraned gladuators. Yonder is the summor home of Sallrest, the Roman historism and semator, the architecture as elaborate as his character was corrupt. There is the pasidence of the post Panea, with a compressed Louvre and Luxemsourg within his walls. There is the honor of Lucration, with vases and antiquities enough to turn the head of a virtuoso. Youder see the Forum, at the highest place in the cary. It is entered by two triumphal arches. It is bounded on three sides by doric columns.

Yumber, in the suburbs of the city, is the home of Arriva Domed, the mayor. of the subsubs, terraced residence of bills cairedon, gardens, fountained, statust, colorasted, the cellar of that ville filled with bottles of rarest wine, a firm drops of which were found 1,800 years afterward. Along the streets of the city are men of might and weamen of beauty ferrord into bronze that many bestudies had an power to bolling. Butthe scores on waits in colors which all time cannot office. Great city of Pomputit. So Senera and Tactina and Chare-Reumonnowe St.

VANCTURED PROPERTY.

Stand with many its walls this even ing of Aug 23, A. D. 7a. Sor the through passing up and down in Tyrian purp and gredies of arabespie, and ments en-chained with proclass stones, proud offcial in imporing togs specing the sizes. carrying trays actink with solders and gentineke with delicacies from paddock and see, and muralist musing over the description of the times passes the need.

ligate doing his best to make them worse. Hark to the clatter and retaplan of the hoofs on the atreets paved with blucks of basalt. See the verdured and flowered grounds aloping into the most beautiful tay of all the earth—the bay

Listen to the rumbling chartots, carrying convivial occupants to halfs of mirth and masquerale and carousal. Hear the load dash of fountains amid the aculptured water ayuphs. Notion the woird, solemn, farreaching hum and din and roar of a city at the close of a summer day. Let Pumpeti sleep well tonight, for it is the last night of peaceful slumber of many long centuries. The morning of the 24th of August, A. D. 19, has arrived, and the day rolls on, and it is 1 o'clock in the afternoon, "Look? I say to you, standing on this wall, as the sister of Piny said to him, the Roman essayist and naval commander, on the day of which I speak, as she pointed him in the direction in which I point you.

pointed him in the direction in which I point you.

There is a peculiar cloud on the sty; a spotted cloud, now white, now black. It is Vesuvius in awful and unparalleled eruption. Now the smoke and fire and steam of that black monster throat rise and sproad, as, by my gesture, I now describe it. It rises, a great column of fiery darkness, higher and higher, and then spreads out like the branches of a tree, with midnights interwrapped in its foliage, wider and wider. Now the sun goes out, and ahowers of pumice stone and water from furnaces more than seven times heated, and sahes in avalanche after avalanche, blinding and scalding and suffocating, descend north, south, east and west, burying deeper south, east and west, burying deeper and deeper in mammoth sepulcher, such as never before or since was opened, Stables, Herculaneum and Pompeii. Ashes ankle deep, girdle deep, chin deep,

Out of the houses and temples and theaters and into the streets and down to the beach fled many of the frantic, but others, if not suffocated of the ashes, were scalded to death by the heated del-nge. And then came heavier destruction in rocks after rocks, crushing in homes and temples and theaters. No wonder the sea receded from the beach as though in terror, until much of the shipping was wrecked, and no wonder that when they lifted Pliny the elder from the sailcloth on which he was resting, under the agitations of what he had seen, he suddenly expired.

For three days the entombment proceeded. Then the clouds lifted, and the cursing of that Apollyon of mountains subsided. For 1.700 years that city of Pompeii lay buried and without anything to show its place of doom. But after 1,700 years of obliteration a workman's spade, digging a well, strikes some antiquities which lead to the exhumation of the city. Now walk with me through some of the streets and into some of the houses and amid the ruins of basilica and Temple and amphithe-

EMOTIONS THE SCENE INSPIRES. From the moment the guide met us at the gate on entering Pompeii that day in November, 1889, until he left us at the gate on our departure, the emotion I felt was indescribable for elevation and solemnity and sorrow and awe. Come and see the petrified bodies of the dead found in the city, and now in the museums of Italy. About 450 of those embalmed by that eruption have been recovered. Mother and child, noble and serf, merchant and beggar, are presentable and natural after 1,700 years of burial. That woman was found clutching her adornments when the storm of ashes and fire began, and for 1,700 years she continued

There at the soldiers' barracks are 64 skeletons of brave men, who faithfully stood guard at their post when the tempest of cinders began, and after 1,700 years were still found standing guard. There is the form of gentle womanhood impressed upon the hardened ushes, Pass along, and here we see the deep ruts in the basaltic pavements worn there by the wheels of the chariots of the first century. There, over the doorways and in the porticoes, are works of art immortalizing the debauchery of a city, which, not withstanding all its splendors, was a vestibule of perdition.

Those gutters ran with the blood of the gladiators, who were the prizefighters of those ancient times, and it was sword parrying sword, until, with one skillful and stout plunge of the sharp edge, the manied and gashed combatant reeled over dead, to be carried out amid the huzzas of enraptured spectators. staid among those suggestive scenes after the hour that visitors are usually allowed there and staid until there was not a footfall to be heard within all that city except our own. Up this silent street and down that silent street we wandered. Into that windowless and roofless home we went and came out again onto the pavements that, now forsaken, were once thronged with life.

And can it be that all up and down these soleran solitudes, hearts more than Leon years ago sched and rejoiced, and feet shuffled with the gait of old age or danced with childish give, and overtasked workmen carried their burdens, and drunkurds staggered? On that mosaic floor did glowing youth clasp hands in marriage vow, and cross that threshold did pailbearers carry the beloved dead, and gay groups once mount those now ageletons of stairvason?

While I walked and contemplated the city seemed suddenly to be thronged with all the population that had ever inhabited it, and I heard its laughter and groan and bia-phemy and uncleanness and infernal boast as it was on the 23d of August, 79. And Vesuvius, from the mild light with which it flushed the sky that summer evening as I stood in disentumbed Pompett, seemed suddenly again to hearn and flame and rock with the lava and darkness and desolation and wos with which more than 18 centuries agn it submerged Pompeii, as with the liturgy of fire and storm the mountain proclaimed at the burial, "Ashen to ashes,

My friends, I cannot tell what practithis walk through uncovered Pompeii. but the first thought that absorbs me is that, while art and culture are important, ther cannot save the morals or the life of a great town. Much of the painting and sculpture of Pompeli was an exwalls where it was first penetied, to be minstred by these who go there, whole wagon loads and whole recent full of it have been transferred to the Museo Bur-benien at Naples, to be admired by the paintings wang curted in ashes and scories for 1.700 years, and since they were uncovered many of them have remained there exposed to the rains and winds and winders and summers of 150 years, the color is as fresh and vivid and true as though pesterday it had passed from the easel. Which of our modern paintings could stand all that? And yet many of the specimens of Pompeilan art show that the city was sunk to such a depth of abomination that there was nothing deeper. Sulptured and petrified and embalmed abomination. There was a state of public morals worse than belongs to any city now standing under the sun.

These Pompetian artists mixed such durability of colors that, though their

Yet how many think that all that is necessary is to cultivate the mind and advance the knowledge and improve the arts. Have you the impression that eloquence will do the elevating work? Why, Pompeli had Cicero half of every year for its citizen. Have you the idea that literature is all that is necessary to keep a city right? Why, Sallust, with a pen that was the boast of Roman literature, had a mansion in that doomed city. Do you think that sculpture and art are quite sufficient for the production of good morals? Then correct your delusion by examining the statues in the Temple of Marcury at Pompeti, or the winged figures of its Parthenon, and the colonnades and srebes of this house of Diomed.

By all means have schools and Dussel-

By all means have schools and Dussel-dorf and Dore exhibitions and galleries where the genius of all the centuries can bank itself up in snowy sculpture, and all briess-brac, and all pure art, but nothing save the religion of Jesus Christ can make a city moral. In proportion as churches and Bibles and Christian printing presses and revivals of religion abound is a city clean and pure. What has Buddhism or Confucianism or Mo-hammedanism done in all the hundreds of years of their progress for the eleva-tion of society? Absolutely nothing. Peking and Madras and Cairo are just what they were ages ago, except as Christianity has modified their condition. What is the difference between our Brooklyn and their Pompeii? No dif-ference, except that which Christianity has wrought. Favor all good art, but take best caro of your churches, and your Sabbath schools, and your Bibles, and your family altars. TWO REMARKABLE CEMETERIES.

Yea, see in our walk today through uncovered Pompeii what sin will do for a city. We ought to be slow to assign the judgments of God. Cities are sometimes afflicted just as good people are afflicted, and the earthquake, and the cyclone, and the epidemic are no sign in many cases that God is angry with a city, but the distress is sent for some but the distress is sent for some good and kind purpose, whether we understand it or not. The law that applies to individuals may apply to Christian cities as well, "All things work together for good to those that love

But the greatest calamity of history came upon Pompeli not to improve its future condition, for it was completely obliterated and will never be rebuilt. It was so bad that it needed to be buried 1,700 years before even its ruins were fit to be uncovered. So Sodom and Gomorrah were filled with such turpitude that they were not only turned under, but have for thousands of years been kept under. The two greatest cemeteries are the cemetery in which the sunken ships buried all the way between Fire island and Fastnet lighthouse, and the other cemetery is the cemetery of dead

I get down on my knees and read the epitapheology of a long line of them. Here lies Babylon, once called "the hammer of the whole earth." Dead and buried under piles of bitumen and broken pottery and vitrefied brick. And I hear a wolf howl and a reptile hiss as I am reading this epitaph (Isaiah xiii, 21), "The wild beast of the desert shall be there, and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures.

The next tomb I kneel before in this cemetery of cities is Nineveh. Her winged lions are down, and the slabs of ater have crumbled, and the sculpture that represented her battles is as completely scattered as the dust of the heroes who fought them. Perhaps I put my knee into the dust of her Sar danapalus as I stoop to read her epitaph (Zephaniah ii, 14.) "Now is Nineveh deslation and dry like a wilderness, and flocks liv down in the midst of her; all the beasts of the nations, both the cormorant and the bittern, lodge in the upper lintels of it." And while I read it hear an owl hoot and a hyena laugh. The next entombed city I pass has a monument of 50 prostrate columns of gray and red granite, and it is Tyre. The next sepulcher of a great capital is covered with scattered columns and defaced sphinxes and the sands of the desert, and it is Thebes. As I pass on I find the resting place of Mycene, a city of which Homer sang, and Corinth, which rejected Paul and depended upon her fortress, Agrocorinthus, which now lies dismantled on the hill, and I move on in this cemetery of cities, and I find the tombs of Sardis and Smyrna and Persepolts and Memphis and Baalbek and Carthage, and here are the cities of the plain and Herculaneum and Stabia and Pompeti. Some of them have mighty excephagus and hieroglyphic entabla-ture, but they are dead and buried never

But the cemetery of dead cities is not yet filled, and if the present cities of the world forget God and with their indecencies shock the heavens let them know that the God who on the 24th of August, 79, dropped on a city of Italy a superincumbrance that staid there 17 centuries is still alive and hates sin now as much as he did then and has at his command all the armament of destruction with which he wholmed their iniquitous predecessors.

It was only a few summers ago that Brooklyn and New York felt an earthquake throb that sent the spople af-frighted into the streets, and that suggested that there are forces of nature now suppressed or held in check which easier than a child in a nursery knocks wn a row of block houses could pro trate a city or engulf a continent deep-er than Pompeii was engulfed. Our hope is in the mercy of the Lord continued to our American cities.

It amazes me that this city, which has the quietest Sabbaths on the contihas the quietest Sablaths on the continent and the best order and the highest tone of morals of any city that I know of, is now having brought into as near neighborhood as Coney Island carnivals of pugilism as debasing as any of the gladiatorial contests of Pompeli. What a precious crew that Coney Island Athletic club is, under whose auspices these orgies are enacted! What a degradation to the adjective "athletic," which ordinarily suggests health and muscle developed for useful purpose! Instead of calling it an athletic club they might better style it "The Ruffian Club For Smashing the Human Visage."

Vile men are turning that Coney Island, which is one of the finest watering places on all the Atlantic coast, into a place for which is one of the finest watering places on all the Atlantic coast, into a place for the offscouring of the earth to congregate, the low horse jockeys and gamblers, and the pugilists, and the pickpockets, and the bleats regurgitated from the depths of the werst wards of these cities. They invite delegates from universal loafurdom to come to their carnival of knuckles. But I do not believe that the pugilism contracted for and advertised for next December will take place in our neighborhood.

one step too far. You may drive the hoop of a barrel down so hard that it breaks. I will not believe that the international prize fight will take place on Long Island or in the state of New York until I see the rowdy rabble rolling drunk off the cars at Flatbush avenue and with faces banged and cut and bleed ing from the imbruting scene. Against this infraction of the laws of the state of New York I lift solemn protest. The curse of Almighty God will rest upon any community that consents to such an outrage. Does any one think it cannot be stopped, and that the constabulary would be overborne? Then let Governor Flower send down there a regiment of state militia, and they will clean out the nuisance in one hour.

Warned by the doom of other cities that have perished for their ruffianism, or their cruelty, or their idolatry, or their dissoluteness, let all our American cities lead the right way. Our only dependence is on God and Christian influences. Polities will do nothing but make things worse. Send politics to moralize and save a city, and you send smallpox to heal leprosy or a carcass to relieve the air of malodor. For what politics will do I refer you to the eight weeks of stultification enacted at Washington by our American senate.

American politics will become a reformatory power on the same day that pandemonium becomes a church. But there are, I am glad to say, benign and salutary and gracious influences organized in all our cities which will yet take them for God and righteonaness. Let us ply the gospel machinery to its ut-most speed and power. City evangeliza-tion is the thought. Accustomed as are religious pessimists to dwell upon statistics of evil and dolorous facts, we want some one with sanctified heart and good digestion to put in long line the statistics of natures transformed, and profiigacies balked, and souls ransomed, and cities redeemed.

Give us pictures of churches, o schools, of reformatory associations, of asylums of mercy. Break in upon the "Misereres" of complaint and despond-ency with "Te Deums" and "Jubilates of moral and religious victory. Show that the day is coming when a great tidal wave of salvation will roll over all our cities. Show how Pompeii buried will become Ponspeii resurrected. Demonstrate the fact that there are millions of good men and women who will give themselves no rest day nor night until cities that are now of the type of the buried cities of Italy shall take type from the New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven. I hall the advancing morn.

I make the same proclamation today that Gideon made to the shivering cowards of his army. "Whoseever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from Mount Gilead," Close up the ranks. Lift the gospel standard. Forward jute this Armageddon that is now opening and let the word run all along e line: Brooklyn for God! All out cities for God? America for God! The world for God! The most of us here gathered, though born in the country. will die in town.

Shall our last walk be through streets where sobriety and good order domin or grogshops stench the airf Shall our last look be upon city halls where justice reigns, or demagness plot for the stuffing of ballot boxes! Shall we sit for the last time in some church where God is worshiped with the contrite heart, or where cold formalism goes through unmeaning genufications? God save the cities! Righteensness is life; iniquity is death. Remember picturesque, terraced, templed, scniptured, beastful, God defying and entombed Pompejit
